

MISSION STREET
WIDENING SOON TO BE REALIZED

The Engineers' Office of the State Highway Commission is making rapid strides towards fruition of the plans for relieving the congestion of traffic on Mission street from the county line to Colma. This section, owing to the widening of San Jose avenue as far as Sikes avenue, has been burdened with a double load of traffic from the two arteries and conditions ordinarily, not to speak of Sundays and holidays, are such now that immediate measures have been recognized to be necessary in order that another "Bottleneck" impediment may not be contended with.

The sum of San Francisco's quota has already been set aside for widening purposes, and the State Highway Commission and the county of San Mateo are working to an immediate program of activity.

Plans will soon be ready, and the work commenced, which will make Mission street the most travelled road in the State of California, it being the only exit from San Francisco, and new industries, garages, machine shops, stores and general activity will spring up in the other portions, which at present have not made very rapid strides, and the Mission street which begins at the county line and reaches to Colma, will in a very short time be marked electrically as are the sections of the lower Mission from Sixteenth to Army streets, and in the downtown blocks.

We of Daly City will be pleased to see these improvements taking shape at this time, as these needs have been felt for years, and have, so far, merely been mooted, and while the desirability of the step has been recognized, this is the first time that there has been any direct action to develop the area in question, and, with the very real assistance of the State Highway Commission and the co-operation of San Francisco, San Mateo county may well feel encouraged in their progressive program of upbuilding and developing the Mission street business area and giving to the State of California one of the finest highways possible with facilities for taking care of any volume of traffic it may be called upon to bear.

This with other improvements that are well underway will be all completed in the very near future and make Daly City a still better place to live.

SAN FRANCISCO
POLICE CAPTURE
MATCH BURGLAR

Albert Ross, alias Jimmie Lujan, who has served ten years for burglary and known as the "match burglar," was caught last week by the clever work of two San Francisco police officers, Detective George Page and Sergeant Frank Jackson. Chief of Police Jack Doyle, upon being notified of his capture, immediately got in touch with the San Francisco police department and had the prisoner brought to Daly City, where he pointed out several homes he had entered and burglarized.

After being notified by Chief Doyle, several people from here whose homes had been entered, called at the property clerk's office at the Hall of Justice on Kearny and Washington streets, San Francisco, during the past week and have identified some of their stolen property.

Anyone in Daly City whose home has been burglarized may call at the Hall of Justice in San Francisco, Property Clerk's office, and ask to see if any of their valuables are in the collection of Albert Ross, alias Jimmy Lujan.

DALY CITY DRIVERS
NEGLECT FIRE LAW

The fire department officers have complained to the police department that the citizens of Daly City are evidently not aware that the law calls for them, upon hearing a siren, to pull to the right and come to a stop until the apparatus has passed them. It has become the usual thing for most of the machine drivers to try to get to the fire before the department, and in this way they have handicapped the officers and men. The police have notified the firemen to take the number of any machine not obeying the law and they will attend to the offenders.

KNIFE WIELDER HELD ON ASSAULT CHARGE

John Bellone, 20, living at 209 California street, South San Francisco, was critically injured and Alfred Franzetti, 18, of Berkley was less seriously hurt in a stabbing affray at South San Francisco, for which Jose Rios, 30, of 407 Cypress avenue, South San Francisco, is held in jail.

Bellone has six wounds in the chest and was reported slightly improved at the South San Francisco hospital. Franzetti, living at 2414 Bonar street, Berkley, was discharged following first aid treatment for three knife wounds in his throat.

Rios attacked them, the men said, after they resented a remark he had made to two young women being escorted by Bellone and Franzetti. Rios is said to have addressed one of the young women as the party passed him at California street and Linden avenue.

The screams of the women brought South San Francisco police who captured Rios after a chase of several blocks during which five shots were fired. The alleged knife wielder was held on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon, said Chief Louis Belloni of the South San Francisco police.

HONEST MAN FINDS
AND RETURNS PURSE

Diogenes would have required no lantern to locate an honest man in San Mateo. Chief of Police Thomas F. Burke of that place had ample evidence of this fact recently when Thomas L. Jones of 245 Grand Boulevard, San Mateo, walked into the police office and handed over a purse containing $130.72 in cash. Jones merely stated that he had found the money on the street near Grand Boulevard and El Camino Real and expressed the hope that its owner would claim it.

Ten minutes later Irene A. Ward, of 36 Third avenue, San Mateo, came to the chief's office to report the loss of her purse. Her description tallied exactly with the purse found by Jones and the money was turned over to her at once.

"FREAK" RAIN WETS
TWO CITY STREETS

A light "freak" rain, brought on by heavy fog banks that rolled in from the ocean last Friday night, fell on northern San Mateo county early Saturday morning, wetting El Camino Real and the streets of San Mateo and Burlingame. No record of the precipitation was noted at the Mills Field weather bureau, however. For nearly half an hour there was a moderate downpour in the vicinity of Millbrae. The rain gave way to sunshine later, and skies cleared.

STORY FROM THE START

Athol Meldrum, young Scotsman, starts out to seek his fortune. He arrives at San Francisco practically broke and meets a fellow adventurer whom he dubs the Prodigal. With Jim Hubbard they join the gold rush to Alaska. On the boat Athol meets Berna, a young woman traveling with her grandfather and a hard looking couple named Winklestein who figure as her aunt and uncle. Landing at Skagway, Athol's party at once takes the trail. In a snowslide on the Chilcoot trail, which Berna and her companions had taken, hundreds of lives are lost. Fearful for Berna's safety, Athol hastens to the scene. He finds the old man dead and learns that Berna is prostrated. At Bennett, Berna comes to Athol, confesses her love, and begs him to marry her, to save her from the harsh fate she foresees. He is unwilling to take such a decisive step, and tells her they must wait. Some days afterward Berna tells Athol that Winklestein plans to sell her to "Black Jack" Locasto, millionaire miner of evil reputation. While realizing how greatly he loves the girl Meldrum flinches from the idea of immediate marriage, and they agree to wait a year. Reaching the gold fields, Athol and his party find the claims all taken and the camp crowded with idle men. Athol's party decides to stay and await developments. Unable to locate Berna, Athol seeks information from Locasto. "Black Jack" disclaims knowledge of her whereabouts, and later, evidently aware of the rivalry between them, lures Meldrum to a lonely spot and beats him into unconsciousness.

"Why don't you strike some one nearer your own size?" he demanded. "You're a brute, a cowardly brute."

Black Jack's face grew dark and terrible. His eyes glinted sparks of fire.

"See here, Englishman," he said, "this isn't your scrap. What are you butting in about?"

"It isn't," said the Jam-wagon, and I could see the flame of fight brighten joyously in him. "It isn't, but I'll soon make it mine!"

Quick as a flash he dealt the other a blow on the cheek, an open-handed blow that stung like a whiplash.

"Now, fight me, you coward."

There and then Locasto seemed about to spring on his challenger. With hands clenched and teeth bared, he half bent as if for a charge. Then, suddenly, he straightened up.

"All right," he said softly; "Spitzstein, can we have the opera house?"

"Yes, I guess so. We can clear away the benches."

"Then tell the crowd to come along; we'll give them a free show."

I think there must have been five hundred men around that ring. A big Australian pugilist was umpire. Some one suggested gloves, but Locasto would not hear of it.

"No," he said, "I want to mark the son of a dog so his mother will never know him again."

He had become frankly brutal, and prepared for the fray exultantly. Both men fought in their underclothing.

Stripped down, the Jam-wagon was seen to be much the smaller man, not only in height, but in breadth and weight. Yet he was a beautiful figure of a fighter, clean, well-poised, free-limbed, with a body that seemed to taper from the shoulders down.

Locasto looked almost too massive. His muscles bulged out. The veins in his forearms were cordlike. His great chest seemed as broad as a door. His legs were statuesque in their size and strength. In that camp of strong men probably he was the most powerful.

And nowhere in the world could a fight have been awaited with greater zest. These men, miners, gamblers, adventurers of all kinds, pushed and struggled for a place. A great joy surged through them at the thought of the approaching combat. Keen eyed, hard-breathing, a-thrill with expectation, the crowd packed closer and closer.

As the two men stood up it was like the little Greek athlete compared with the brawny Roman gladiator. "Three to one on Locasto," some one shouted.

Then a great hush came over the house, so that it might have been empty and deserted. Time was called. The fight began.

With one tiger rush Locasto threw himself on his man. Right and left he struck with mighty swings that would have felled an ox, but the Jam-wagon was too quick for him. Twice he ducked in time to avoid a furious blow, and, before Locasto could recover, he had hopped out of reach. The big man's fist swished through the empty air. He almost overbalanced with the force of his effort, but he swung round quickly, and there was the Jam-wagon, cool and watchful, awaiting his next attack.

Locasto's face grew fiendish in its sinister wrath; he shot forth a foul imprecation, and once more he hurled himself resistlessly on his foe. This time I thought my champion must go down, but no! With a dexterity that seemed marvelous, he dodged, ducked and side-stepped; and once more Locasto's blows went wide and short. Not one of his sledgehammer smashes reached their mark, and the round closed without a blow having landed.

I was at the ringside. At the beginning I had been in an agony of fear for the Jam-wagon. But now I took heart and looked forward with less anxiety.

Time was called, and Locasto sprang up, seemingly quite refreshed by his rest. Once more he plunged after his man, but now I could see his rushes were more under control, his smashing blows better timed, his fierce jabs more shrewdly delivered. Again I began to quake for the Jam-wagon, but he showed a wonderful quickness in his footwork, darting in and out, his hands swinging at his sides, a smile of mockery on his lips.

"Who is he?" those at the ringside began to whisper. Time and again it seemed as if he were cornered, but in a marvelous way he wormed himself free. I was all keyed up, on edge with excitement, eager for my man to strike, to show he was not a mere ring tactician. But the Jam-wagon bided his time.

And so the round ended, and it was evident that the crowd was of the same opinion as myself. "Why don't he mix up a little?" said one. "Give him time," said another.

Locasto came up for the third round looking sobered, subdued, grimly determined. Again he assumed the aggressive, gradually working the Jam-wagon into a corner.

Suddenly Locasto closed in. He swooped down on the Jam-wagon. He had him. He shortened his right arm for a jab like the crash of a pile-driver. The arm shot out, but once again the Jam-wagon was not there. He ducked quickly, and Locasto's great fist brushed his hair.

Then, like lightning, the two came to a clinch. Now, thought I, it's all off with the Jam-wagon. I saw Locasto's eyes dilate with ferocious joy. He had the other in his giant arms; he could crush him in a mighty hug, the hug of a grizzly, crush him like an eggshell. But, quick as the snap of a trap, the Jam-wagon had pinioned his arms at the elbow, so that he was helpless. For a moment he held him, then, suddenly releasing his arms, he caught him round the body, shook him with a mighty side heave, gave him the cross-buttock, and, before he could strike a single blow, threw him in the air and dashed him to the ground.

"Time!" called the umpire. It was all done so quickly it was hard for the eye to follow, but a mighty cheer went up from the house. Locasto rose to his feet. He was shamed, angered beyond all expression. Heaving and panting, he lurched to his corner, and in his eyes there was a look that boded ill for his adversary.

Time again. With the lightness of a panther the Jam-wagon met Locasto, and now his intention seemed to be to draw his man on rather than to avoid him. He had resumed his serpentine movements, advancing and retreating with shadow-like quickness, feinting, side-stepping.

Then I saw the Jam-wagon edging up to Locasto. He feinted wildly, then, stepping in closely, he swung a right and left to Black Jack's face. A moment later he was six feet away, with a bitter smile on his lips.

With a fierce bellow of rage Locasto charged him. He smashed his heavy right with all its might for the other's face, but, quick as the quiver of a bowstring, the Jam-wagon side-stepped and the blow missed. Then the Jam-wagon shifted and brought his left, full weight, crash on Locasto's mouth.

At that fierce triumphant blow there was the first dazzling blood gleam, and the crowd screamed with excitement. In a wild whirlwind of fury Locasto hurled himself on the Jam-wagon, his arms going like windmills. Dodging, ducking, side-stepping, blocking, the Englishman foiled the other at every turn, and, just before the round ended, drove his left into the pit of the big man's stomach, with a thwack that resounded throughout the building.

Once more time was called. The Jam-wagon was bleeding about the knuckles. Several of Locasto's teeth had been loosened, and he spat blood frequently. His face was sober now, strained, anxious, and he seemed to be waiting with menacing eyes to get in that vital smash that meant the end.

The Jam-wagon began to put more force into his arms. He drove in a short-arm left to the stomach, then brought his right up to the other's chin. Locasto swung a deadly knock-out blow at the Jam-wagon, which just grazed his jaw, and the Jam-wagon retaliated with two lightning rights and a nervous left, all on the big man's face.

Then he sprang back, for he was excited now. In and out he wove. Once more he landed a hard left on Locasto's heaving stomach, and then, rushing in, he rained blow after blow on his antagonist. They came into a clinch, but this time the Jam-wagon broke away, giving the deadly kidney blow as they parted. When time was called both men were panting hard, bruised and covered with blood.

Round six. Locasto sprang into the center of the ring. His face was hideously disfigured. Only in that battered, blood-stained mask could I recognize the black eyes gleaming deadly hatred. Rushing for the Jam-wagon, he hurled him across the ring. Again charging, he overbore him to the floor, but failed to hold him.

Then in the Jam-wagon there awoke the ancient spirit of the Berserker. He cared no more for punishment. He was insensible to pain. He was the sea-pirate again, mad with the lust of battle. Like a fiend he tore himself loose, and went after his man, rushing him with a swift, battering ball of blows around the ring.

Now they were in a furious mix-up, and suddenly Locasto, seizing him savagely, tried to whip him smashing to the floor. Then the wonderful agility of the Englishman was displayed. In a distance of less than a two-foot drop he turned completely like a cat. Leaping up, he was free, and, getting a waisthold with a Cornish heave, he bore Locasto to the floor. Quickly he changed to a crotch-lock, and, lastly, holding Locasto's legs, he brought him to a bridge and worked his weight up on his body.

Black Jack, with a mighty heave, broke away and again regained his feet. This seemed to enrage the Jam-wagon the more, for he tore after his man like a maddened bull. Getting a hold with incredible strength, he lifted him straight up in the air and hurled him to the ground with sickening force.

Locasto lay there. His eyes were closed. He did not move. Several men rushed forward. "He's all right," said a medical looking individual; "just stunned. I guess you can call the fight over."

The Jam-wagon slowly put on his clothes. He was badly bruised about the body, but not seriously hurt in any way. Shudderingly I looked down at Locasto's face, beaten to a pulp, his body livid from head to foot. And then, as they bore him off to the hospital, I realized I was revegeed.

CHAPTER VII

"Let me introduce you," said the Prodigal, "to my friend the 'Pote.'"

"Glad to meet you," said the Pote cheerfully, extending a damp hand. "Just been having a dish-washing bee." He finished his dish-washing and joined us, pulling on an old Tuxedo jacket.

Frick First Motorist Taken in Speed Trap

The first automobile speeder and the first speed trap in the New England district were described in the Boston Post. Condensed, it happened in 1897. In this wise:

The speeder, in his little high-wheeled contraption, was roaring down Arlington street, going every bit as fast as some modern concrete mixers and making an equal amount of noise. The legal limit was ten miles an hour and the local police chief told the court his prisoner had been making eighteen.

"Were you?" inquired the judge. "Why, your honor, my motor car won't even make the ten-mile limit!" protested the driver. The strange part of it is that the judge believed the driver and discharged him.

To maintain his reputation for

Aberdeen's Quarries

Aberdeen has nine granite quarries employing 5,000 men. Aberdeen's granite is the hardest in the world, but not so brightly colored as granite from Norway, Sweden and Finland.

"Whew! Glad that job's over. And now, having immolated myself on the altar of cleanliness, I will solace my soul with a little music."

He took down a banjo from the wall and, striking a few chords, began to sing. His songs seemed to be original, even improvisations, and he sang them with a certain quaintness and point that made them very piquant.

There came a knock at the door, and a young man entered. He had a broad smiling face and a bulgy forehead. The Pote introduced him to me.

"The Yukon Yorick."

"Hello," chuckled the newcomer, "how's the bunch? Don't let me stampede you. How d'ye do, Horace! Glad to meet you." (He called everybody Horace.) "Just come away from a meeting of my creditors."

He seemed brimming over with jovial acceptance of life in all its phases.

Several men dropped in to swell the bohemian circle. Some had brought bottles. The little cabin was crowded, the air hazy with smoke, the conversation animated.

The Pote had the floor.

"A friend of mine had a beautiful pond of water lilies. They painted the water exultantly and were a triumphant challenge to the soul. Folks came from far and near to see them. Then, one winter, my friend thought he would clean out his pond, so he had all the nasty, slimy mud scraped away till you could see the silver gravel glimmering on the bottom. But the lilies, with all their haunting loveliness, never came back."

What are you driving at, you old dreamer?

"Oh, just this: In the nasty mud and slime of Dawson I saw a tiny girl. She lives in a cabin by the Slide along with a Jewish couple. I only caught a glimpse of her twice. They are unspeakable, but she is fair and sweet and pure. I would stake my life on her goodness. She looks like a young Madonna—"

He was interrupted by a shout of cynical laughter and shut up abashed, but I had my clew. I waited until the last noisy roisterer had gone.

"In the cabin by the Slide?" I asked.

He started, looked at me searchingly: "You know her?"

"She means a good deal to me."

"Oh, I understand. Yes, that long, queer cabin highest up the hill."

"Thanks, old chap."

"All right, good luck."

Very softly I approached the cabin, for a fear of encountering her guardians was in my heart. Carefully I reconnoitered, and soon, to my infinite joy, I saw the Jewish couple come forth and make their way toward. The girl was alone.

How madly beat my heart! It was a glooming kind of night, and the cabin looked woefully bleak and solitary. No light came through the windows, no sound through the moss-chinked walls. I drew near.

I knocked at the door. No answer.

"Bernie," I cried in a faltering whisper.

Came the reply: "Who is there?"

"Love, love, dear; love is waiting."

Then, at my words, the door was opened, and the girl was before me. She stood gazing at me, and a little fluttering hand went up to her heart as if to still its beating.

"Oh, my dear, I knew you were coming. Something told me you would come at last. And I've waited—how I've waited! I've dreamed, but it's not a dream now, is it, dear; it's you?"

"Yes, it's me. I've tried so hard to find you. Oh, my dear, my dear!"

I seized the sweet, soft hand and covered it with kisses. I loved her so, I loved her so!

"High and low I've sought you, beloved. Thank God, I've found you, dear! Thank God! Thank God!"

"Oh, it's you, really, really you at last," she cried again, and there was a tremor, the surface ripple of a sob in that clear voice. She fetched a deep sigh: "And I thought I'd lost you forever. Wait a moment, I'll come out."

Endlessly long the moment seemed, yet wondrously irradiate. Then, at last, she came. She had thrown a shawl around her shoulders, and coaxed her hair into charming waves and ripples.

"Come, let us go up the trail a little distance. They won't be back for nearly an hour."

When we had seated ourselves on the hillside, she turned to me.

Britain's Government

Air View of British Houses of Parliament.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

THE British general election which recently turned the government over to the Labor party and reversed numerous policies, also brought into prominence the cabinet form of government which differs markedly from the form followed in the United States. During the past two decades one of the outstanding world developments has been the spread of the responsible cabinet system.

Before the World war broke up the autocracies of Europe, France was the only republic on the continent employing the British form of cabinet government. Now the list includes, besides France; Finland, Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania, Poland, Germany, Czechoslovakia, and Austria.

Recent agitation to permit members of the United States cabinet to be present on the floor of the senate and house and to take part in debate on matters concerning their departments serves to bring out the differences between the privileges and duties of the cabinet members of various countries.

To begin with, the "cabinet" of the United States is a cabinet in name only, for the government of the United States is in no sense a "cabinet government" as are the governments of Great Britain and France, and those of a large number of the other leading countries of the world. There is not even formal sanction for the existence of our cabinet as an advisory council to the President. The members have an undoubted legal status as heads of the various administrative departments, but the President need never call them together. President Washington held no cabinet meetings at first, and President Wilson did not call his department heads together for a period of many months. When the President does receive the advice of his cabinet, he is under no obligation to follow it.

Great Britain is "the mother of cabinets" as well as "the mother of parliaments." Her cabinet is not of a fixed size, and while most members are heads of departments, there may be members "without portfolio" who have no special duties. In direct contrast to the situation in the United States, every member must be a member of either the lower or upper house of parliament. All have seats in both houses and therefore not only have the privilege of debating but also of voting. Of greatest importance, when an important vote in the house of commons goes against the cabinet its members must resign so as to permit a new cabinet, usually of the opposing political party, to be formed.

The cabinet, under the British system, is really a committee of the house of commons which the party in power permits to manage all executive affairs, and to shape and lead all legislative action. The cabinet in action is the real government; while it functions the prime minister is the real ruler, and parliament is his instrument.

But there are checks and balances. The house of commons can force the resignation of the cabinet, and the cabinet can force the dissolution of the house. The matter is thus put squarely up to the people, who elect another house, from the majority party of which a new cabinet is chosen.

Practically all of the other part of the western world is under cabinet government. This includes all of Europe except Russia and Switzerland, South Africa, and the French portions of North Africa. Canada brings a large part of North America into the cabinet column. In the East, Australia and New Zealand have true cabinet governments, Japan has a slightly modified form, and China a nominal one.

The constitutions of most of the countries of the western hemisphere have been modeled after that of the United States with an absence of responsible cabinets. Chile is the only republic of the New world with a cabinet whose members both sit in congress and must resign when there is a formal vote of "lack of confidence."

Traced Back to Runnymede.

The British cabinet form of government came into existence by a series of happy accidents. Because the old privy council became such a large, unwieldy body, the king fell into the habit of consulting with only the few leaders, holding a small council in his cabinet or private apartment. Shortly afterward England had two German kings who could not understand English, and the "cabinet council" was permitted to meet without the sovereign. By the time an English-speaking king came to the throne the custom of excluding the king from cabinet meetings had been firmly fixed.

By degrees the king practically lost his power to dismiss the cabinet, and it became responsible first to parliament, and then solely to the house of commons.

Some students of government, looking farther back, see the roots of parliamentarism, with its outgrowth, the "cabinet committee," at Runnymede, where Magna Carta was signed 714 years ago.

Runnymede lies only five miles down the Thames from Windsor, the town which holds the most sumptuous of the palaces of the British kings and which gave its name as an English family name to the present monarch when, during the World war, his German name became unacceptable. The meadow is only some twelve or fifteen miles upstream from London—so close that the city's citizen soldiers maintain a rifle range for practice on the edge of the famous tract.

There is a conflict of opinions as to whether Runnymede or Magna Carta island, just off shore, was the site of the signing of the Great Charter. A generally accepted version of the historic incident states that the army of barons encamped on Runnymede, that King John's followers remained on the opposite bank of the stream, and that the meetings between the monarch and the leading barons took place on the little island. A cottage on the island houses a stone slab on which it is asserted that the document was signed.

Value of the Great Charter.

Though the original "Articles of the Barons" were signed on June 15, 1215, the day on which they were presented, the provisions were not put in the form of a charter and executed by John until June 19; so this day also might lay claim to the title, "Magna Carta Day." Four more days were taken up with the making of provisions for carrying out the charter. During the entire period of a week and a day the baronial army remained encamped under arms at Runnymede, while King John rode over each day from his palace at Windsor.

The Great Charter which was signed at Runnymede or on its nearby island has been pretty well accepted as the greatest document in English history. Some commentators have gone so far as to see in it the creator of the English constitution of today. Other English students of the charter feel that it did not differ materially from other charters granted by earlier kings, but that it has been especially valuable on account of the dramatic situation surrounding its signature and of the ideals, formulated because of the reverence for the document shown by subsequent generations. According to such views it harbored the germs which later developed into the writ of habeas corpus, trial by jury and the parliamentary system.

A very large part of Magna Carta was devoted to restraining the king's taxing powers and to settling out feudal procedure, the latter a field now wholly without practical interest. Nor were all the steps taken in Magna Carta forward steps. It sanctioned the trial by ordeal, provided credible witnesses were present. One paragraph provides that no one shall be arrested on the charge of causing the death of her husband. The reason as signed for this "reform" was that a woman could not prove her case in the judicial combat.

Smoking Among Sailors

In the days before matches were invented, a lamp was lighted at certain times aboard ship when smoking was permitted. All smokers got their pipes lighted from this lamp. With the introduction of the safety matches, sailors of the navy may carry them, but the spirit of the smoking lamp still prevails, since there are only certain times of the day when smoking is permitted.

Schooner Vessels

The first vessel of the schooner type is said to have been built in Gloucester, Mass., about 1713 by a Captain Robinson. When the vessel was launched a bystander exclaimed, "O, how she scoons!" Whereupon Robinson said, "A schooner let her be!" "Scoon" means to skip or skim on the surface of the water.

DESPITE "SPECKS," HAFEY IS A STAR

Was Declared Through, but Returned to Lead Sluggers.

"Chick" Hafey of the St. Louis Cardinals, a player beset by hard luck since he broke into fast company, is rounding into his own.

For a time it seemed as though sinus trouble and other handicaps might force Hafey out of the National league and possibly cause him to give up baseball altogether.

"Chick" couldn't see the length of his bat for a time. Now he is out in front of the home run parade, with a fine lead towards seasonal honors and every fan who has followed his ups and downs is rooting hard for him.

Hafey hit two home runs the other day to help the St. Louis Cardinals beat the Cincinnati Reds. His first drive cleared the scoreboard at Redland park which is 415 feet from home plate and 25 feet high.

This was the longest blow ever made in Cincinnati. A little later, Hafey drove another homer over the left field fence.

In the opening game of the season, "Chick" hit a homer off Red Lucas, who had been working effectively, enabling the Cardinals to start the pennant race with a victory.

Hafey's optimism soon will start advertising, for "Chick" took to glasses as a last resort and with pronounced success.

Few ball players have made good behind spectacles in fast company. There was Lee Meadows, for one, and the rest can be counted on the fingers of one hand.

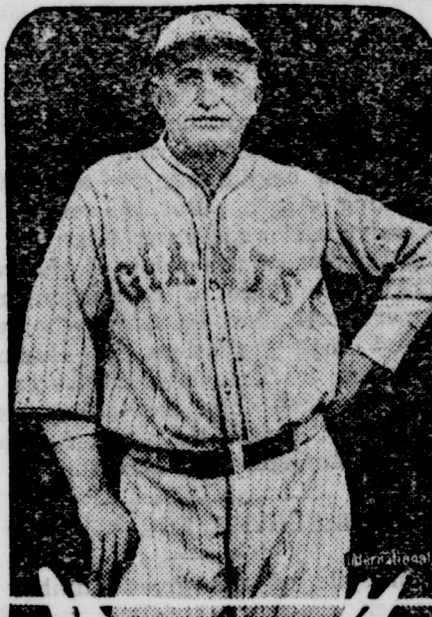

When he finally decided to resort to glasses, "Chick" confessed that it seemed to him like a last resort.

"I'll try them for a season, and then if I can't make good I'll get out and admit I'm licked," he said early this year.

From the way he is going he apparently will make good, and his return to form may mean big things for the National league champions.

Hafey has had hard luck practically ever since he came up to the majors, although he has been recognized as one of the best outfielders in the game. He is a native of Berkeley, Calif., Helen Wills' home town, and is twenty-six years old.

Freshman athletes at Wisconsin must pass in their studies to get their letters and sweaters.

Public parks golfers of Buffalo can play all year for $25 or pay 50 cents a day with an extra quarter for Sundays.

Jack Berg, the English lightweight, never even witnessed a professional contest until he stepped into the ring for his first bout.

Walter Hagen, American golf professional, has won the British open championship four times in eight attempts since 1920.

Dudley I. Skinner of Bridgeport, Conn., a member of the junior class, was elected captain of the Williams track team for next year.

No player has won the United States open golf championship twice since Jack McDermott managed to turn the trick 17 years ago.

Charley Borah, captain of the University of Southern California track team, has run his last race, he says. An old leg injury has been bothering him.

Over a three-mile course, the Grand National Steeplechase, which was won in 1927 and 1928 by Jolly Roger, is considered the severest test of its kind in the United States.

Care Free, veteran racehorse, will run kindly for only one man, A. E. Alexandra. He can be entered in the cheapest of events without fear of any horseman claiming him.

Paavo Nurmi, the "Phantom Finn," has decided to give up short-distance races in favor of long-distance running, and is expected to compete in the marathon event at Los Angeles in the 1932 Olympics.

OLD FOLKS SAY
DR. CALDWELL
WAS RIGHT

The basis of treating sickness has not changed since Dr. Caldwell left Medical College in 1875, nor since he placed on the market the laxative prescription he had used in his practice.

He treated constipation, biliousness, headaches, mental depression, indigestion, sour stomach and other indispositions entirely by means of simple vegetable laxatives, herbs and roots. These are still the basis of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, a combination of senna and other mild herbs, with pepsin.

The simpler the remedy for constipation, the safer for the child and for you. And as you can get results in a mild and safe way by using Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, why take chances with strong drugs?

A bottle will last several months, and all can use it. It is pleasant to the taste, gentle in action, and free from narcotics. Elderly people find it ideal. All drug stores have the generous bottles, or write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. BB, Monticello, Illinois, for free trial bottle.

Beneath His Notice

Rogers Hornsby told a baseball story at a banquet in New York.

"A Sunday school teacher," he said, "asked one of her boy pupils:

"Willie, who defeated the Philistines?"

"Willie had been gazing out of the window in a dream. He gave a start and answered:

"I dunno, teacher. 'I don't never toller none o' them small league teams'."

An instructor drawing on the general knowledge of her pupils asked for the products of China. A girl eager to recite received the opportunity and said:

"Tea and laundry marks are the most important ones."

Also people work hard and play hard to forget their troubles. Don't think it is all gusto.

Are You Ready

When your Children Cry for It

Baby has little upsets at times. All your care cannot prevent them. But you can be prepared. Then you can do what any experienced nurse would do—what most physicians would tell you to do—give a few drops of plain Castoria. No sooner done than Baby is soothed; relief is just a matter of moments. Yet you have eased your child without use of a single doubtful drug; Castoria is vegetable. So it's safe to use as often as an infant has any little pain you cannot pat away. And it's always ready for the crueler pangs of colic, or constipation or diarrhea; effective, too, for older children. Twenty-five million bottles were bought last year.

A SYMBOL OF LIBERTY

On July 14 just 140 years ago the famous prison fortress called the Bastille was stormed and captured by a Paris mob shortly after the beginning of the French Revolution, in 1780.

Long a place of incarnation for political prisoners, the Bastille was looked upon as a symbol of oppression. Therefore, while only seven prisoners were found within its walls at the time of its capture and destruction, this victory of the people has been considered the beginning of liberty and popular government in France.

Although France was yet to pass through the Reign of Terror, the regime of Napoleon, and monarchy before the establishment of the present Third Republic in 1871, Bastille Day became the great national holiday, celebrated as July 4 is celebrated in the United States.

The site of the former prison is now called the Place de la Bastille, marked by a towering column of bronze, surmounted by a gilded figure of Mercury, spreading his wings as in flight. One of the historic monuments of Paris, it is viewed with interest by visitors from all over the world as the French symbol of Liberty.

AIR FLIVVER COMING

Within five years a business man living in a distant suburb may board his one-passenger air flivver, fly to the city and alight on his office roof. Returning at night he may land in his own back yard with ease and safety. Such is the prediction of conservative pilots and engineers.

This may happen in less than five years if plans for the commercial manufacture of a new machine called the autogyro are carried out. Invented by Juan de la Cierva, a Spaniard, the autogyro is fitted with an ordinary airplane motor and propeller, but in addition has revolving wings in a sort of windmill arrangement which enables it to sustain itself in the air at slow speed, thus permitting it to rise or land in the space of an ordinary tennis court.

The revolving wings are said to give the machine stability in flight, besides making a crash to earth almost impossible, even though the pilot should entirely lose control. It is declared that it "flies like an airplane but settles to earth like a parachute."

An American company is now perfecting a design for immediate commercial production. If the claims of its promoters are made good, the autogyro may soon revolutionize short distance passenger traffic.

SCIENCE AIDS FARMER

Science, rather than legislatures, must be depended upon to aid in solving the farm problem, according to Louis J. Taber, head of the National Grange and one of the outstanding farm leaders of the United States.

In a recent address he enumerated some of the ways in which chemists are already assisting agriculture, and in which even greater aid may be expected in the future—such as finding new uses for farm products, developing cheaper plant foods, devising more effective methods of fighting insect pests, and utilizing material now considered worthless.

The skepticism regarding the benefits of farm relief legislation hinted at by Mr. Taber is shared by many economists and other earnest students of the farm problem. Even with the $500,000,000 authorized by the new farm bill, any farmer who believes that this alone will put him on the road to prosperity is due for a disappointment.

In the last analysis the farmer's future is largely in his own hands. The adoption of improved methods, with better planning, and a determination to raise his own food and stock feed at home are among the means which he may employ for bettering of conditions. All the legislation which might be passed will not help the farmer who does not diligently try to help himself.

JAMES SMITHSON'S GIFT

One of the most remarkable gifts in history, both with respect to the circumstances under which it was given and the results which have sprung from it, was that of James Smithson, an Englishman, who left his fortune of about $540,000 to the United States just 100 years ago.

From this legacy has arisen one of the leading scientific establishments in the world, in accordance with the terms of his will, which provided that the money should be used to found in the city of Washington, under the name of the Smithsonian Institution, "an establishment for the increase and diffusion of knowledge among men."

A strange fact connected with his gift is that James Smithson never set foot on American soil. He was born in France of English parents, and died in Italy. He was the natural son of Hugh Smithson, who afterwards became the Duke of Northumberland; his mother was Elizabeth Keate Macie, a descendant of Henry VII. Smithson was a scientist of some note, deeply interested in research, particularly in chemistry. Just why he left his fortune to the United States is probably unknown. In any event, as was recently said, "Smithson's bequest became the inspiration of American science and even to a measurable extent of world science." Besides, it has served as an inspiration to other men who have given princely gifts to promote the spread of knowledge.

BAD BOYS NOT SO BAD

Like all other cities, Detroit has had its bad boy problem. From the juvenile court records it appeared that in 1925 one out of every eight boys from 17 to 19 years of age had been arrested. Detroit led all the big cities in juvenile delinquency.

Then a number of citizens took notice of the situation and organized the Boys' Club of Detroit. A four-story building was fitted up with lockers, showers, games, workshops and the like, and the boys were invited to make themselves at home. The membership now numbers nearly 4,000, with dues of 25 cents a year.

These boys are drawn from the class which formerly roamed the streets, engaging in all sorts of deviltry. Now they spend much time in their club, playing games or building radios, airplane models, toys and many useful articles. A specialty is making toys for crippled children, craftsmanship going hand in hand with social education.

Members of the club seldom come before the juvenile court any more. With suitable outlets for their energies they do not find it necessary to engage in anti-social activities. Great good has been accomplished through the initiative of a group of forward-looking citizens who did not believe that the "bad" boy was as bad as he seemed to be. And results have proved that they were right.

FUTURE MEAT SUPPLY

Within fifty years the principal source of the world's meat supply will not be cattle, but reindeer from Alaska, Canada and Siberia, in the opinion of Vilhjalmur Stefansson, famed Arctic explorer.

He gives several reasons for his prediction, an important one being the economy in raising reindeer, which live on grass in summer and on lichens and bushes in winter. Besides, reindeer meat may be kept in natural cold storage in the far North until it is desired to ship it out.

Another reason for the predicted decline of cattle as a food source is the increase of tuberculosis, which is making serious inroads on the Argentine herds, and threatens American herds also.

The possibility of having to eat reindeer meat is nothing to be alarmed about, Stefansson says, as its taste is little different from that of beef. But most folks will doubtless prefer to stick to beefsteak as long as it is available.

"TAKING STOCK"

Public schools take stock periodically as carefully and conscientiously as does any other business.

Business and Industry take stock and check operations yearly. It is usually at or following such season that they set up their policies for the new year, determine the goal, survey the past and estimate the future. It is the dividend season; it is the season when the stockholders, if the business is on a yearly dividend basis, receive their financial returns.

The school year is on a yearly dividend basis. The commencement season represents the closing season. The school executives present yearly the graduating classes in increasing numbers as dividends to the tax-paying community. They show that the school business is attracting young men as well as young women, as evidenced by the fact that the graduating classes are better balanced as between the sexes. They are in a position to show the holding power of the schools on all classes and types of children by the increase in numbers now graduating, an increase out of 11 proportion to the population growth of the city or town. It is now a class of twenty where formerly it was ten a class of one hundred where formerly forty.

We see in the personal of the graduating classes a more serious, a more alert and a more developed group. We find in these classes the evidence of the much talked of equality of opportunity, as every graduating class will have representation from every calling and every station in life.

This is the season of the year when a close scrutiny is made of the working force of the school. Pupil failures are analyzed and causes determined. Where the fault lies within the school organization, provision is made for its remedy. When outside the schools, it receives equal attention. Departments are analyzed as to the number of pupils served and the consequent cost. Those not adequately functioning are eliminated.

There is stock taking by the teaching, supervisory and executive force. This is in the nature of individual self-inspection. Many of these determine that it is a time for a testing of their methods an opportunity to gain new vision and renewed inspiration. To that end, on the credit of the next year's salary, many a teacher will betake herself to a summer school that she may better serve the community.

While the school buildings are being repaired and renovated, while the children are enjoying a summer of play and recreation, the school executive is organizing for a greater teaching effort. But the most impressive and reassuring situation in the interest of the public is the very large percentage of superintendents, supervisors and teachers who will spend their vacations in Summer Sessions or Teachers' Institutes an evidence that they are taking stock and that they are their own most exacting Manager and Director.

22 BILLIONS FOR "EATS"

In spite of the great number of women who are restricting their diet in an effort to reduce weight, the American people are spending $22,000,000,000 a year for food.

Some interesting facts concerning food trends were brought out in a recent survey made by dealers for C. U. Williams, manufacturer of Ice-O-Matic electric refrigerators, who declares that while people are eating less food, the quality is better, with

SUMMONS TO ESTABLISH TITLE

No. 15716.
 In the Superior Court of the State of California, in and for the County of San Mateo.

The Duxsee Company, a corporation, Plaintiff, vs. All persons claiming any interest in, or lien upon, the real property herein described or any part thereof, Defendants.

The People of the State of California: To all persons claiming any interest in, or lien upon, the real property herein described or any part thereof, defendants, greeting:

You are hereby required to appear and answer the complaint of The Duxsee Company, a corporation, plaintiff, filed with the Clerk of the above-entitled Court and County, within three months after the first publication of this Summons, and to set forth what interest, if any, you have in or upon that certain real property or any part thereof, situated in the County of San Mateo, State of California, particularly described as follows:

Lots 1 and 2 in Block 10; Lots 27, 29 and 30 in Block 11; Lot 17 in Block 2; Lots 41, 42, 43, 44, 45 and 46 in Block 10; Lots 1 and 48 in Block 18, as all of said lots and blocks are shown upon that certain map entitled "Map of $75.00 Lot Homestead," which said map was filed for record in the office of the County Recorder of the County of San Mateo, State of California, on the 3rd day of October, 1870, in Volume 1 of Maps at page 6.

And you are hereby notified that, unless you so appear and answer, the plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief demanded in the complaint, to-wit: That it be adjudged that the plaintiff is the owner of said property in fee simple absolute; that its title to said property be established and quieted; that the Court ascertain and determine all estates, rights, titles, interests and claims in and to said property, and every part thereof, whether the same be legal or equitable, present or future, vested or contingent, and whether the same consists of mortgages or liens of any description; that plaintiff recover its costs herein and have such other relief as may be met in the premises.

WITNESS my hand and the Seal of said Court this 14th day of May, A. D. 1929.

(SEAL)
 ELIZABETH M. KNEESE, Clerk.
 By Mura E. Stillson, Deputy Clerk.
 Franklin Swart, Attorney for Plaintiff.

MEMORANDUM
 The first publication of this Summons was made in the Daly City Record on the 17th day of May, 1929.

The following persons are said to claim an interest in, or lien upon, said property adverse to plaintiff:

William J. Wilson and Henry C. Hyde, as assignees of Pioneer Loan & Land Association, a bankrupt corporation.

meals more varied, more wholesome and more palatable.

"Modern housewives have learned the art of setting a more tasty and healthful table," says Mr. Williams "with vegetables, fruits, crisp salads, and frosty tidbits for dessert being consumed more freely, in preference to cheaper and heavier foods."

There is little doubt that the average person eats a greater amount than is healthful. On the other hand, crazy food fads are harmful, and should be avoided. A common sense plan is to eat a variety of foods, but keep the portions really small. By this means a woman may reduce without starving herself.

It seems that a suitable diet for everyone might be provided through the judicious use of $22,000,000,000 worth of food annually. The difficulty is, of course, that some have far more than their share, while others have far less. And no one has ever found a way to solve that problem.

A great scenic route to the East . . .

Make the most of your travel investment this summer by planning your trip via this famous route thru the mountains.

The 100-mile Feather River Canyon and the High Sierras form a most magnificent panorama of mountain scenery followed by the Canyon of the Colorado River; the Eagle River Canyon; the heart of the Colorado Rockies, and the spectacular Royal Gorge (your train pauses for ten minutes at the famous "Hanging Bridge").

Through Pullmans to Chicago via Western Pacific to Salt Lake City—Denver & Rio Grande Western to Denver, thence Burlington Route. No change of cars required. And by a fortunate adjustment of train schedules, the regions of chief scenic interest are to be seen during daylight hours. For tickets, and complete information, write or call on Supervisor Thomas Hickey was one of the speakers of the day.

Among those who motored there from Colma were Mr. and Mrs. Carl Schwartz and son, Carl, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. B. Silicani, J. Silicani, Mr. and Mrs. T. Fahy and children and Angilo Benidetti and children.

COLMA WOMAN SOLE VICTIM OF SUNDAY AUTOS

Mrs. Caroline Fuch, 62, of Colma, was the sole victim of a week-end automobile accident in San Mateo, which brought damage to a number of automobiles, including one driven by John Parrott, 420 El Camino Real, clubman and member of one of California's best known families.

Mrs. Fuch was severely cut about the face and head when a car in which she was a passenger crashed into the rear of another machine driven by Fred C. Jenks, 422 Tenth avenue, San Francisco. She was treated at Mills Memorial hospital. The car in which she was riding was driven by her son, Henry Fuch, also of Colma.

Parrott's auto was damaged when he crashed it into the rear of one driven by Fred Howard, 925 Bush street, San Francisco. The accident occurred at Crystal Springs road and Third avenue. Both drivers escaped injury.

P. J. OLMO HAS VERY FAST GREYHOUND

P. J. Olmo, of Colma, is the proud possessor of a twenty months old greyhound that promises to be one of the fastest running dogs in the country. Last Sunday it had no difficulty in winning the Half Moon Bay Cup Stake run at Half Moon Bay against a large entry of other greyhounds. This dog has been named after Thomas L. Hickey, County Supervisor, who is an old friend of P. J. Olmo, and from all accounts it is going to break all records that will make him as famous as his namesake.

MOTORISTS SWAMP TRAFFIC BUREAU

Going "over the top" for the week's record, the state traffic bureau at Redwood City one day last week took on a "bargain sale rush" when 250 San Mateo county motorists made application for new operator's licenses and took the necessary examination. Before the office closed at noon, nearly 100 more applications had been filed, giving a total of more than 1000 for the week. The new law goes into effect August 15.

HALF MOON BAY BEAN PICKER GETS SIXTY DAYS

Vincent Castro, a Mexican bean picker of Half Moon Bay, was sentenced to 60 days in the county jail at Redwood City, after pleading guilty to a charge of attempted assault following his arrest a month ago. The charge was reduced from one of assault with a deadly weapon, filed against Castro after he had attacked his wife with a knife at their camp near Half Moon Bay. Sentence was passed by Superior Judge George H. Buck. Mrs. Castro was cut about the arm following a domestic quarrel, officers said.

A large number of friends gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Berardy to bid Father Schenone a fond farewell. A very enjoyable evening was spent and at the conclusion a delicious supper was served after which Father Schenone, Angelo Schenone and Miss Antoinette Schenone left for Livermore, where they will spend some time visiting their many friends.

Those present were Father Joseph Schenone, of Colma, Angelo Schenone, Mr. and Mrs. Michel Maffie and sons, Ernest Bacilli and Al Bacilli, John Pisa from San Jose, John Ezita, Alfredo Rossino, Clarence Hammock from Long Beach, William Berardy and sons, Ted and Eddie. Mrs. William Berardy was the proud hostess of the evening.

AT THE EMBASSY

The quarreling and bickering of the members of a musical comedy company may be serious business to the participants but to the onlookers it proves a source of considerable amusement. From the peevish prima donna to the boss of the stage crew whose best girl is out front with another man on tickets he has furnished, not to mention the check room girl and the head usher, everyone seems to have his own little pack of troubles. Anyhow, this is the case in "On With the Show." Warner Brothers first all natural color presentation, now appearing at the Embassy.

Lee Moran, who will be remembered as a hard-boiled police reporter in "The Racket," which appeared in San Francisco a few months ago and who is the stage crew boss of "On With the Show," has as many troubles as anyone and his attempts to straighten them out are an antidote for those in the audience with troubles of their own.

AT THE MARION DAVIES

Sophie Tucker, star of "Honky Tonk," a talking and singing Warner Brothers' Vitaphone production now on the screen at the Marion Davies, ran away from home at an early age—and into fame. For her first vaudeville engagement she received $12.50 a week and her performance was in blackface. She now receives $6,000 a week.

Aside from her vaudeville work she has appeared in a number of musical comedies, and has been entertainer and mistress of ceremonies at many well-known night clubs in New York and in England. Miss Tucker has attained a position in the affections of English society such as has never before been reached by any other American performer. In "Honky Tonk" she is seen as a night club entertainer. In this picture she sings seven typical Tucker songs and her personality is as vivid on the screen as on the vaudeville stage.

Electric Light Is Fifty Years Old

Display of Edison's First Lamp Features Golden Jubilee Observance.

New York.—During this summer and fall, thousands of replicas of Thomas A. Edison's first incandescent lamp are to be displayed throughout the United States. This quaint, old-fashioned bulb, will be one of the features of Light's Golden Jubilee, the celebration to commemorate its production 50 years ago.

The replica, an exact duplicate of the original lamp so far as external appearance is concerned, will be seen in every city, town and village from coast to coast. A few minor changes in construction have been made in order to adapt it for use on modern electrical circuits.

Modern lighting owes its being to this feeble lamp, which on October 21, 1879, delighted Mr. Edison and his assistants by burning for 40 hours. This was the culmination of 13 months of experiment and an expenditure of $40,000, carried on in face of public ridicule. Few believed Mr. Edison could "subdivide the electric light," which was one of the problems to be solved. Such unpleasant epithets as "fool" and "booster" were freely applied to him. There were some, however, who did have faith in Mr. Edison's ideas. Such financiers as J. P. Morgan and Henry Villard were interested in the Edison Electric Light company, capitalized at $300,000 to develop incandescent lighting.

Worked Night and Day.

In his Menlo Park (N. J.) laboratories, Mr. Edison gathered a group of talented, earnest young men to assist in his search for a practical incandescent lamp. They worked tirelessly. Sleep was doled out in minimum allotments. Mr. Edison himself at this time was on the job day and night. His laboratory notes during this period filled more than 200 note books. In discussing this long campaign in later years, Mr. Edison said that the electric light caused him the greatest amount of study and required the most elaborate experiments.

"Although I was never discouraged," he said, "I cannot say the same for all my associates. And yet through all those years of experimenting and research, I never once made a discovery. All my work was deductive and the results I achieved were those of invention pure and simple. I would construct a theory and work on its lines until I found it untenable, then it would be discarded at once and another theory evolved. This was the only possible way for me to work out the problem."

In his first lamp, Mr. Edison used a piece of carbonized sewing thread as the incandescent filament. That lamp is today known as the "sewing-thread lamp." Next, looped filaments of carbonized paper were used with comparative success. Still seeking a more serviceable filament, Mr. Edison chanced to try a bit of fiber from a palm-leaf fan.

This chance experiment started one of the most romantic adventures in the history of the incandescent lamp—a world-wide fiber hunt. Such promising results were obtained from the bit of fiber from the palm-leaf fan, that before long, scouts were sent to many far-off lands to find the species of bamboo best suited to carry Mr. Edison's new lamp to success. More than 6,000 specimens were shipped back to the Menlo Park laboratory. Of these, a Japanese bamboo was selected and for nine years it was grown by a Japanese farmer for Mr. Edison and used in all the incandescent lamps. The Edison electric light system was introduced and the incandescent lamp won its laurels with the filaments of this Japanese fiber.

Later other materials were used—

Nature Solves Flood Problem for Farmer

Salina, Kan.—Nature has settled the flood control problem of J. R. Jenkins, who owns a large farm twenty-five miles south of Salina.

For years his farm house was almost on the bank of the Smoky Hill river, but now it is a mile away. The stream which formerly passed through the farm does not now touch it. The May flood cut a channel through another man's farm and instead of a large bend in the river the stream now runs straight north across the county, cutting off a neck that makes the river about four miles shorter in its course. Jenkins did not object to the river when it was normal but when it was carrying flood waters it did considerable damage to his land and crops. He says, however, he is satisfied with the present conditions.

cellulose, then tantalum and finally tungsten which is in use today.

Not Perfect, Says Inventor.

Some years ago, in commenting on his invention, Mr. Edison said, "No invention is perfect and the incandescent lamp of today is not an exception. Light without heat is the ideal, and that is still far off. The electric incandescent lamp of today is the cheapest form of illuminant that has ever been produced, but some day it will be cheaper and colder than it is. There is a good deal of truth in the saying that the firefly is the ideal. It is, so far as coldness goes. But the color is against it. You couldn't use a thousand-candle firefly to match colors, and you wouldn't want the insect to light up a street, because the light would be a hideous greenish yellow. But some day we will get reasonably near the firefly for efficiency without copying his disagreeable color. The task needs much investigation, much research of the kind we did in 1879."

Venezuela Has City of Nameless Streets

Caracas, Venezuela.—This city of 100,000 is in effect a town of nameless streets, although the officials long ago decreed a modern system of North First, East Second and similar titles. In practice nobody uses them.

Addresses in Caracas are all given with reference to street corners. Each street intersection is named, and house numbers start new in every block.

For instance, if you live at 507 East Fifth, your real address will be something like "Little Birds to Green Cross, 97," and nobody will understand if you say anything else.

The corner names are centuries old, and some of them are expressive. They include Torre (of the cathedral), Father Tierra, the Palm Tree, Drugs (where they were sold), and Physician

Clock Runs Six Years Without Being Wound

Lancaster, Ohio.—Police investigating a reported robbery at the old Den man homestead, one of Lancaster's historic residences, once occupied by James G. Blaine, but uninhabited since the death six years ago of John Denman, found a gold self-winding clock, started by Mr. Denman, was still running.

The furnishings of the home, undisturbed since the death of the last resident, were not molested by those who entered the house.

Freak Tidal Wave

Capitola, Calif.—A survey has disclosed that a freak tidal wave, which tossed more than a dozen pleasure and fishing boats high on the beach, caused approximately $5,000 damage along the waterfront here.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

San Jose will be host to the annual state meeting of building exchanges of California on September 7 and 8, according to an announcement from W. L. Howe, secretary and manager of the local Builders' Exchange.

The El Cerrito City Council is considering marking traffic lanes in San Pablo avenue through the city, segregating slow moving traffic from fast traffic. The plan would be similar to the traffic lanes on peninsula highways.

A petition, sponsored by the San Rafael forum of the Exchange Club was sent to officials of the Northwestern Pacific Railroad, asking that modern automatic warning signals be installed at the Irwin street extension. Third, Fourth, Fifth and Mission street crossings.

Finding it cheaper to transport students in its own busses than on contract, the board of trustees of Washington High School will decide the type of bus to be acquired. Several coaches are now operated by the school to carry pupils to and from the eight communities in the high school district.

San Joaquin county's 1929 assessment roll is 122,000,000, just $15,000,000 greater than 1928. Yet the amount of revenues at existing tax rates which can be raised from the roll is some $13,000,000 less than last year. This is due to a $1,200,000 decrease in vineyard assessments caused by shrinkage of grape returns which was not made up by the $17,000,000 addition to the rolls of stocks and bonds.

The assessed valuation of the city of Richmond has been cut nearly a million dollars, by the city assessor. The valuation this year, exclusive of unsecured personal property, is $29,861,585 against $30,925,850 last year. Loss of $500,000 formerly assessed against the East Bay Water Company, now publicly owned, and adjustment of various assessments was blamed. The county assessment for Richmond was increased nearly half a million dollars, however. It is $26,415,980 this year, against $25,930,900 last year.

Mrs. R. B. Steyer, Lodi, turned her car across the road near Angels Camp on observing a brush fire, compelling dozens of automobilists behind to halt. She passed down the line to get out and fight the fire. They got out with shovels, hose and old sacks and extinguished the fire after 30 acres had been burned over.

The reopening of thirty-seven years of litigation was seen when Thomas H. Brain of Petaluma brought suit against Richard L. Crane to quiet title to a 100-acre ranch near Petaluma, formerly owned by plaintiff's father. Judgment is also asked for $10,000 for unlawful possession and for profits accrued. In addition $1,000 a year rental is asked for half the years.

Preparations are being made at the arsenal at Benicia to mount a giant 14-inch gun, one of the two designed by the army ordnance department for Pacific Coast defense. The gun weighs 730,000 pounds and will be fired from a specially constructed railway carriage. It will fire a projectile weighing 1,440 pounds for a maximum distance of twenty-eight miles. Its length is sixty feet. A similar gun has been assigned to San Pedro.

Gold shaken out of grass roots. This was an actuality when Bob Watson and T. H. McArdle made a strike while digging a trench near the main street of Sonora. Gold filled quartz valued at several hundred dollars was discovered at a depth of two feet, and both miners have visions of riches as they prepared to follow their treasure vein. Miners swarmed over this same ground in the '50's, when Sonora was the hub of the rich Mother Lode.

An increase in the valuation of Palo Alto property for the fiscal year 1929 30 of $668,300 was announced by the city assessor. The assessed valuation will be approximately $12,987,350, which is comparable with the valuation of $12,319,050 set in 1928-29. There will also be shown an increase in unsecured personal property assessments with the figures set at $470,110 as compared to $459,670 in 1928-29.

County committees of the Trails of '49 Committee of the Sacramento region are being organized in each of the twenty-one counties. The secretary of the Sacramento Region Citizens' Council, who also serves as secretary of the committee, reported that active groups will be at work within every one of the counties within three weeks. These committees are preparing to place highway markers on the historic roads for the purpose of directing tourists to points famous in gold rush days. In many of the counties the Native Sons and Native Daughters are lending their hearty support to the movement.

A total of $10,000,000 or more will be spent by the federal government in the establishment of an army bombing squadron base north of San Rafael and the air base and depot at Alameda. Word of the decision to establish the bases at Alameda and at Santa Venetia has been made officially by the War Department. The Santa Venetia bombing base will occupy 640 acres of land once owned by the California Packing Corporation. The force at the base will comprise 110 officers and 1250 enlisted men.

SUMMER SOUPS

As soups are always in season, the variety is only modified by the time of year.

Vermont Chicken Soup.—Reheat six cupsful of chicken stock, season with salt and pepper if needed and a little grated onion. Add one head of lettuce shredded and one cupful of green peas. Simmer until the peas are done. Beat one egg and add enough bread crumbs to make a paste, shape into balls and season, drop into the hot soup and simmer ten minutes. Serve.

Chicken and Potato Soup.—Peel and boil six large potatoes. Mash through a ricer, add one quart of chicken stock, one pint of cream, two tablespoonfuls of butter and salt and pepper to taste. Rub through a sieve, reheat, add a tablespoonful of minced parsley and serve with croutons.

Cream of Mushroom Soup.—Take one cupful of fresh mushrooms, cut into dice and cook in a tablespoonful of butter for five minutes. Add one quart of good chicken stock, a tablespoonful each of butter and flour cooked together and one cupful of cream. Season to taste with salt and pepper.

German Carrot Soup.—Peel and slice six carrots and fry brown in fat with a minced onion. Cover and cook slowly until soft. Add six cupsful of beef stock, season with salt and pepper and boil fifteen minutes. Strain through a fine sieve and serve with croutons.

Brown Onion Soup.—Peel two dozen small onions and fry brown in butter; add two teaspoonfuls of sugar. When brown add four cupsful of beef broth, bring to a boil and serve. Toast bread and butter well, place a slice in each soup dish, pour over the soup.

Velvet Soup.—Cook one-half cupful of tapoca in six cupsful of beef stock. Beat the yolks of three eggs in the tureen and pour in the soup, stir smooth and season with a grating of nutmeg, salt and pepper. Veal stock is very good for this soup.

Any leftover vegetable, such as a cupful of asparagus, peas or cauliflower added to a cream soup will make a most wholesome dish.

For Breakfast.

There are so many breakfast foods on the market that it would be impossible to name them all, and new ones appear every few days. It is a safe rule even when one follows the methods for cooking such cereals as directed on the package, to multiply the time at least twice and sometimes three times. This will not only make the food more palatable but more digestible.

The fruits in season are the most acceptable. The orange and grapefruit we always have with us, but when melons are on the market, they make a pleasant change which is always enjoyed. Peaches, plums, cherries, and all the berries are always appropriate for the first meal of the day.

The habit of filling the center of cantaloupes and muskmelons with chilled ice spoils the flavor of the delicious fruit. Chill them before cutting and serve at once when taken from the ice.

Apples are an all-the-year-round standby. The choicer apples are kept in cold storage and, if not held too long in the market, keep their flavor fairly well.

Rice Pancakes.—Dissolve a tea spoonful of soda in a tablespoonful of cold water and stir it into two cupsful of thick sour milk. Add two cupsful of sifted flour, a half teaspoonful of salt, two well-beaten eggs and one cupful of boiled rice. Beat the yolks and whites of the eggs separately and fold in the beaten whites at the last. Add two tablespoonfuls of melted butter and cook on a hot griddle.

Serve cakes, piled layer-cake fashion, in twos with strawberries or other fresh berries, crushed and sweetened. Butter the cakes, heap on the berries and serve hot.

Though coffee, cocoa tea or simply hot milk offer a choice for the hot drink, one may include the cereal coffee and malted milks for those who prefer them.

Buttermilk is a most desirable drink and when obtainable, fresh and cool, is most welcome for a morning drink. Serve with a slice of dry buttered toast on a hot morning, following a fruit course, and it will be found sufficient for breakfast.

A tartar sauce is excellent to serve with a hot cooked fish. Take one cupful of mayonnaise, add two tablespoonfuls of chopped olives, a tablespoonful of chopped capers, a teaspoonful of minced parsley and chives, a little green and red pepper chopped.

Acidity

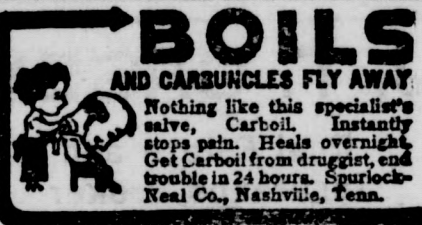

The common cause of digestive difficulties is excess acid. Soda cannot alter this condition, and it burns the stomach. Something that will neutralize the acidity is the sensible thing to take. That is why physicians tell the public to use Phillips Milk of Magnesia.

One spoonful of this delightful preparation can neutralize many times its volume in acid. It acts instantly; relief is quick, and very apparent. All gas is dispelled; all sourness is soon gone; the whole system is sweetened. Do try this perfect anti-acid, and remember it is just as good for children, too, and pleasant for them to take.

London Gets Photoradiogram From San Francisco

The transmission of the first commercial photoradiogram from San Francisco to London, utilizing the new transcontinental radio circuit which Mayor Walker of New York opened, was announced by R. C. A. Communications, Inc. The picture, shown above, was posed and developed in the Hollywood studios of Radio Pictures, the motion picture producing organization of R-K-O, rushed by airplane to San Francisco, and there filed for transmission to London, via New York. This feat marked the first time that a photograph has traversed a distance of approximately 6,000 miles to its destination, in commercial radio transmission. The photograph shows Henry Didot, French consul at Los Angeles, and Henry Bancroft-Livingston, English vice consul of the same city, with Bebe Daniels and Betty Compson grouped around a representation of the northern hemisphere topped by a radio tower.

CHINESE FOSSIL SKULL IS CLEW TO "MISSING LINK"

Eight-Year Search in Limestone Near Peking Bares Jaw and 20 Teeth.

Peking.—From 20 teeth and a portion of skull and jaw the harvest of eight years' gleaning in the limestone deposits near here science may reconstruct the earliest progenitor of man, the so-called link between animal and human.

Since the autumn of 1921 when in a group of important fossils discovered in pleistocene limestone deposits investigators found a tooth undeniably that of a human or unknown mammal, an international group of scientists gathered here have been convinced that not only is the Peking man, so called, the oldest human remnant, but that probably he was the immediate ancestor of man, linking him with the lower animals.

Discovery of the prehistoric human has been so gradual that the findings have not received the publicity scientists believe it deserves. Dr. J. G. Anderson, Swedish archeologist, discovered the original mammal fossils. Dr. Walter Granger, chief paleontologist of the American Museum of Natural History, was visiting Doctor Anderson at the time.

After cursory examination the fossils were shipped to Sweden for study and while undergoing laboratory examination the lone tooth was found. The find was communicated at once to the scientists in China and arrangements were made for exhaustive excavations in the ancient limestone cliffs that held the mammal fossils.

Funds for the project were obtained from the Rockefeller foundation and the China foundation, a Chinese organization formed with funds remitted from the American Boxer indemnity. Davison Black, a Canadian, head of the department of anatomy in the Peking Union Medical college and a comparative anatomist of international reputation, was placed in charge of the work.

During the intervening years scattered teeth were discovered, then parts of the jaw and upper portion of the skull. This year additional teeth and parts of the skull have been unearthed, giving scientists a fairly complete conception of the ancient forebear of man.

The excavations are still under way. Doctor Granger stated his belief that the remnants point to the end of the long scientific search for the "missing link."

Blesses Horses

Freiburg, Baden.—An ancient custom, revived last year after many decades, was again carried out this year in St. George, in the Black Forest, when the "St. Jorgen ride" was held. About 200 horses were brought to the parade to receive the church's blessing. The custom goes back for many centuries.

AN INTERESTING BOOKLET ISSUED BY BANK OF ITALY

For many years Mr. and Mrs. Average Citizen everywhere have been told that it is a real privilege to be born in California and that nothing short of Paradise, itself, could excel the pleasures and delights of a lifetime spent in the Golden State. It now appears that the last session of the State Legislature made the picture complete by taking much of the traditional sting out of the final parting, providing that said parting also encompasses the probating of the last will and testament within this favored commonwealth.

In a booklet sent to all of its branches today, the Bank of Italy, through its Trust Department, shows how, through inheritance tax relief legislation, the financial details incident to the final phase of human life have been made much less burdensome than in the past. Widows who figure as beneficiaries are placed in a class by themselves, as their exemption amounts to $50,000 under the new law. An additional $50,000 is exempt in an estate consisting solely of community property. In other words the average citizen in California does not have to bother about state inheritance taxes at all, for estates of the size and character noted, particularly the ones left by husbands to their wives, are much above the average amount left by decedents, according to W. J. Kieferdorf, vice-president and trust officer of the bank.

"As a matter of fact," said Mr. Kieferdorf, "there is a general fear of inheritance taxes on the part of those who contemplate leaving substantial estates under their wills, which is quite unwarranted. With the allowance of 80 per cent of Federal estate taxes as an offset for payment of State inheritance taxes, the average citizen may as well disregard the whole subject of special taxes relating to the transfer of his property to others. Under the liberal schedule recently enacted in California, estates of less than $100,000 will benefit especially. The reduction of inheritance tax rates is quite noticeable, however, in case of estates running as large as $500,000. Even for estates above $500,000 the reduction in percentage of taxes for varying degrees of kinship runs from 2 to 8 per cent.

"Californians generally will appreciate the fact that our State now has one of the most favorable inheritance tax schedules in the country. Where community property is involved, the advantage of residence in California as compared with other States is especially striking. In case of a widow's inheritance, if we compare our rates with five other leading States, there is a saving to California residents averaging $1,800 for estates of $100,000, and $26,000 for estates of $1,000,000."

Union textile workers of Mexico recently passed resolutions opposing the introduction of modern machinery in plants where they work. But the march of industrial progress can not be stopped by passing resolutions.

SIDELIGHTS

Whatever else may be said of the Congressional Record, it is generally quite free from typographical errors. But a proofreader made a slip a few days ago, as a result of which a member was quoted as protesting against "the high cost of living."

One of the first trial divorces on record has proved to be either a failure or a success, according to how one looks at it. Mr. and Mrs. Carl Williams of Chicago were the principals in the experiment, and after being separated six months were remarried by the judge who divorced them.

The National Association of Broadcasters has undertaken a large order. It proposes that all broadcasters exclude from programs "any matter which would commonly be regarded as offensive." We suggest eliminating phoney advertising and whining tenors as a starter.

Stanley Courtney vs. Stanley Courtney was the strange title of a court case recently tried in Kenton county, Kentucky. Even stranger was the fact that it was a divorce suit, both husband and wife being named Stanley. Stanley was granted a decree after establishing that the female Stanley had left him a month after their marriage.

Charles Little, recently arrested in North Carolina after a nationwide search, is a different kind of "fall guy." He is said to have defrauded insurance companies, hotels and department stores out of nearly $50,000 by faking injuries from falls, and collecting various sums when man-agers or owners sought speedy compromise settlements.

A real case of the office seeking the man is reported from Lewes, Del., where Dr. James M. Thomson is serving his twenty-eighth term as mayor. For 15 years he has vigorously protested against continuing in office, but he is unanimously elected each year anyway.

Arraigned on a charge of driving while intoxicated, Captain Gordon Grickmay of London took a novel means of proving to the judge that the policeman who arrested him was "all wet," by singing this fragment of song without a hitch:

When my father, lathers
He lathers rather free;
I would rather lather father
Than father lather me.

Congressman Henry St. George of Virginia, 76, recently married Miss Mary Jane Williams, 60, superintendent of a woman's home in Washington. Asked by a colleague whether it did not take great courage to marry at the age of 76, Congressman shot back: "It was the spirit of '76 that made the United States."

Tom Smith of Brooklyn, like many another before him, is in trouble because of a woman. After successfully removing $5,000 worth of silk from a store, he went back to get his sweetheart three pairs of silk stockings and was caught. He is now in jail, charged with burglary.

GLARING HEADLIGHTS SOON A MISDEMEANOR

Driving with glaring or dazzling headlights any place in California will be a misdemeanor when the new motor vehicle act becomes effective August 14.

The division of motor vehicles announced today that citations would be handed all drivers with such lights after that date and that court appearances would be required.

Declaring it his intention to use the new law as a means of ridding the highways of glaring lights, Chief Frank G. Snook is preparing to instruct all traffic officers that the new law will be strictly enforced.

Snook explained that the new law permits an officer to stop any dazzling lights. Such driver may be required to submit to a screen test and if the lights are found to be improperly focused the officer shall issue notice of arrest.

This notice shall require that the offender have his lights adjusted before appearing in court and be prepared to submit satisfactory evidence that he has done so when he appears. The punishment thereafter will be up to the discretion of the court.

The new law makes it a misdemeanor for any person to refuse to take a screen test and the officer is permitted to waive the five-day clause in the old law and arrest such driver immediately in the event of refusal.

"We have more complaints about glaring lights than any other single offense and we are going to enforce this new law," said Snook.

The motor vehicle chief urged all drivers to have their lights checked immediately at one of the 1500 official adjusting stations maintained throughout the state.

"Many people who are doing the most complaining are themselves driving with glaring lights and don't know it. Thousands of them would discover this if they would only take the trouble to have their lights checked. The charge for adjustment at these stations is so small that any person can afford to go in once in a while and have it done."

The old law requires that drivers that drivers have their lights adjusted within twenty-four hours after having been stopped by the officer and to present their certificates of adjustment to the nearest district attorney or justice of the peace. This has been found to be extremely unsatisfactory as many offenders disregard the officer's instructions or tilted their lights to suit themselves after having them adjusted.

The new law designates a headlight as legal "if none of the main bright portion of the headlight beams rises above a horizontal plane passing through the lamp centers, parallel to the level road upon which the loaded vehicle stands, and in no case, higher than forty-two inches, seventy-five feet ahead of the vehicle."

TIPS FOR MOTORISTS

Before starting on a summer vacation automobile trip, it is wise to equip your car with an emergency canteen for gas, oil and water.

Wire wheels on cars so equipped should be checked for adjusting of the spokes at least once every three months. It is suggested that a wheel expert be commissioned to do the job, for it is easy to get the wheels out of true.

Motorists doing much night driving in cities or mountains will help themselves greatly by equipping their cars with good spotlights. Precaution should be taken to have the light set in the proper position, according to California's laws.

Motorists will be wise to include a medical first aid kit in their equipment for the summer vacation trips, not only for possible personal necessity but to aid others in distress.

If the car runs well but appears to lag this may be caused by slipping clutch, which the experienced motorist will readily observe by comparing the speed of the motor with the traveling speed of the car.

When your engine misses at high speed but not at low or on a hard pull, and it is evident that the spark plugs are working correctly, the contact breaker no doubt needs adjusting. This should be done by an expert.

If your engine lacks the proper flexibility, the trouble may be found in the carburetor, and the auxiliary air intake should be checked up. When this condition exists, it calls for a very careful adjusting, which should be done by a carburetor expert.

When it is found the Bendix drive will not function, it is possible that the drive shaft is gummed up with dirty oil or grease, which will prevent the driving pinion moving to its position in contact with the fly wheel. The most common cause is a broken Bendix spring.

Wheat farmers haven't experienced much relief from the special session of Congress.

Guarantee the proper handling of your estate

"I have appointed an Executor and Trustee whose resources total nearly one billion dollars"

That is what a prominent California business man told his wife after appointing Bank of Italy National Trust and Savings Association as Executor and Trustee under his Will. Financial responsibility figures heavily in the minds of successful business leaders when they choose the institution or individual who will carry on for them in the management of their estates. The large capital, wide experience, vast resources, and prestige of California's leading bank assures responsible, efficient administration, and the maintenance of the highest standards of management. Its great wealth and high integrity places the institution beyond the temptations that might easily come to an individual trustee under pressure of circumstances. Choose the most highly responsible successor you can find. Remember—the welfare of your heirs and the safety of all you have accumulated is at stake. Consult your attorney now. Have him draw your Will—and guarantee the proper handling of your estate by nominating California's largest bank as your Executor and Trustee.

From the H. H. Smith Lumber Yard

VOLUME II FRIDAY, JULY 19, 1929 NUMBER 51

Published in the interests of the People of Daly City and vicinity by H. H. Smith and Employees.

Life is like a deck of cards. When you are in love it is hearts; when you are engaged it is diamonds; when you are married it is clubs; and when you die it is spades.

Bogg: "If a Scotchman makes a lot of money and spends it all, what's his name?"
Logg: "Don't know. What is it?"
Bogg: "Just plain Bughouse."

An officer was showing an old lady over the battlements.

"This," said he, as he pointed to an inscribed plate upon the deck, "is where the captain fell."

"No wonder," replied the old lady. "I nearly slipped on it myself."

Build Well With Lumber

The essential qualities of a home, and which determine how it shall be built, are: First, protection from heat and cold; then comfort, convenience and ventilation. Appearance, durability, low first cost and upkeep are factors, too. Lumber is nature's provision for our comfort. It conducts neither heat nor cold, and an occasional coat of paint will brighten and preserve it indefinitely.

Social Error
A husband is nothing but a bachelor who over-estimated his power with women.

"James, will you go to the station and meet my mother-in-law? Here's a dollar for you."

"But if she doesn't come?"
"You shall have $2."

"One man is knocked down by an automobile every twenty minutes in Los Angeles."
"You would think it would wear him out."

SHINGLES—All grades and kinds.

We have found out that one man who does things is worth twenty who can tell you how they ought to be done.

Tit: "I want to leave the world better than I found it."
Tat: "It should be better after you are gone."
